Habitat Restoration Volunteer

Across Moray, Saturday's and Tuesday's

Wild things! started their Habitat Restoration Project in 2014 in response to the growing problem of invasive non-native plants in Moray.

Over the last few years it has become apparent that plants such as giant hogweed, Japanese knotweed and Himalayan balsam are spreading at an alarming rate; reducing space and nutrients available to our native plants. We work with volunteers to control the invasive plants, whilst offering people opportunities to build upon their skills and experience and increase their employability.

Through our Habitat Restoration Project, Wild things! aims to: Help our native flowers to regenerate by controlling invasive plants. Provide opportunities for people to develop new skills and experience. Offer training in a range of areas including the safe use of pesticides, first aid and naturalist subjects. Support people in taking gentle exercise and spending more time in the outdoors.

When does the Habitat Restoration Project run? Almost every Saturday throughout the summer 10am-3pm. Frequent sessions on Tuesday evenings, around 6pm-8pm (times are subject to change).

Wild things! can offer a local pick up if you do not have your own transport, and will provide protective clothing, all necessary tools and equipment, and tea and coffee!

You will play a critical role in supporting the work of the Wild things! by developing a list of potential donors/partners as well as a timeline for deadlines and reports. You will then support the CEO and other staff in applying for funds as well as helping to develop our overarching fundraising strategy.

There could be opportunities for the right applicant to also be considered as a trustee of the charity if they were interested.

We are very much open to a remote-working arrangement as much, if not all, of the work can be done from home.
